In collaboration with Chris Smith of the Naked Scientist ICGEB will be offering Ph.D students an opportunity to gain exposure to the latest techniques and developments in science communication for the general public. The successful applicant will be supported to take part in a 6 week training opportunity with Chris Smith and his team in Cambridge UK, which will culminate in the production of a radio broadcast for BBC Radio 5 live.

Interested students should send a full CV outlining any activities that they have performed that are linked to science communication and public outreach, together with a statement as to why such an opportunity would be valuable to their career.

A short list of candidates will be selected by the ICGEB Science Communication team, and will then be interviewed directly on line by Chris Smith and the team in Cambridge.

Closing dates for applications: 14 July 2023

More info at: https://www.thenakedscientists.com/articles/science-features/science-communication-internship